TERRY FOX RUN - Nearly 700 Westglen and Ross Ford students tear it up at the bus lanes Sept. 27.

Lions help the food bank stock up

BY KEVIN VINK
 Review Staff

The Lions' Annual Food Drive which took place last Thursday was a huge success, pulling in about 5,533 pounds of food and $570 in cash, which all go directly to the Mountain View Food Bank.

Vance van Dam, one of the organizers and a local Lions member, said "We did well. Westglen sent us about 10 more students than we'd anticipated, so we had lots of help. We averaged just about three students per member vehicle and we had some extra members that paired up with others."

He noted that there were about 15 Lions including himself, and there were about 35 students who took part.

The Lions will be giving the students a donation, he added, that will be put toward sports equipment for the school. Last year it was about $500, he added.

"At this point it's almost essential, we need their help. So we're really happy that they could provide so many students."

"It's a win-win all the way around, we make a donation to them, they help us out, and the food bank helps everyone out in this whole area."

"They were a big help and they were good kids," he said. "It was a nice evening. The weather was great again which always helps. We collected (close to $570) - about twice the cash we collected last year, you know, for people who don't want to donate food."

He added that some members take the initiative to ask for cash donations and some people just offer cash in lieu of food, "and that's always good too, because then the food bank can buy stuff that they're short of, fill holes on the shelf and that sort of thing, or buy items that they're low on."

Van Dam said that people were more prepared this year than in previous years, in part because so many businesses around town had the posters up in their windows. The Lions also ran some ads on 96.5 CKFM and van Dam also went in recently for an interview at the station.

He said that once the food has been collected, it is weighed to come up with an estimate as to its worth. "The food bank counts the food as $2.25/lb.," added

Van Dam, "and according to that calculation, the Lions collected just under $12,500 worth of food."

Gayle Meier, a board member for the food bank, said they are very happy with the result of the food drive because they are nearing their busy period with winter fast approaching.

"We're overflowing here, but that's awesome," said Meier, "and we always can use more food, for sure. Kids are back in school and we're busy."

She said typical clients of the food bank include the unemployed and single mothers with kids. The food bank helps alleviate the high cost of food and provides some essentials to those in need.

"That's what we're here for."

First Fun Run and Walk had 'discouraging' turnout

BY KEVIN VINK
 Review Staff

The first annual Family Fun Run and Walk to support Westglen School's Breakfast Program did not have the turnout that organizers had anticipated.

Didsbury Agricultural Society member Lorna Richmond, who helped co-ordinate the Sept. 22 event did manage to raise $100 for the Westglen School's breakfast program, but they didn't have as many people show up as they had hoped.

"Those that came out did awesome," said Richmond. "And we also had a fun day at the grounds afterwards, the kids had a brilliant time there." She noted that about 10 runners came out to participate in the initial run. "We thought we would have had a bit more, you know with it being for the middle school and for the breakfast program, but it is what it is - it's the first year we tried it."

It was a great weekend but it's a double-edged sword, she said, "when the weather is good, you're trying to do events and people have so many other things they want to do too. We got some money for the breakfast program and that was the idea of the thing."

She said she thinks the likelihood of the ag society hosting the event next year is high, though it hasn't been discussed yet.

Mock accident drives the message home

BY KEVIN VINK
Review Staff

Students of Didsbury High School got a surprise after lunch last Monday, as they came out to the bus lane to find a car accident with firemen and police attending the scene.

It was not a real scene, but the message the RCMP, DHS, and fire department wanted the kids to hear was as real as a simulation can be.

Cpl. Warren Wright of the Didsbury RCMP said "The idea behind it was to let them experience as close to reality as practice can be."

He likened it to watching a hockey game on TV, versus at the arena. "Which one are you going to remember more?"

"I would guess that most of them have never seen a crash scene," noted Wright, "and what we were trying to do is give them as realistic a scenario as possible to let them see the victims screaming and groaning, see that there are deceased people under blankets, see the firemen working to save the occupants' lives and extract them from vehicles, and see the police doing their investigation."

The exercise, he said, gives students a chance to see what the result of a drunk or impaired driver can be. "It's a cautionary tale. It's like, 'we're going to show you something, and it's not real, but it's as close to real as we can get it, and we want you to pay attention and look at what's going on...but we also want to protect you. We would never take you to a real scene.'"

"But if you can remember what that's like, maybe you won't get into the vehicle when you know the driver's been drinking or smoking up. You don't want to risk your life."

Chantelle Neufeld, a drama student who played the drunk driver said "It ended up being really good. We all ended up pulling together in the end and pulling something out that hopefully will make an impact on somebody."

"You know what, you may not think that drunk driving has any effect on others if you're doing it. But if you take a crash and you put yourself in the seat and then you end up killing two people, or three people, or injuring people, you can be charged for it and taken away for it, so it's not an ideal choice. You're not the only one that's affected by it."

Garth Dagg, principal of DHS, said "The feedback I've got was good. There were kids who got out there and thought that it was a real situation and I think that's the way the RCMP kind of intended it to be."

Dagg noted that when the students came back into the school, staff were able to debrief them over the PA system and fill them in on what they had just seen.

"I was so proud of our drama students," he added. "They did a great job of acting the part and crying and sobbing. I thought they did a really good job."

One of the key messages DHS is trying to emphasize for students this year is alcohol and drug awareness, and this plays along with that well.

"This was, I thought, a good way to bring that up," Cpl. Wright noted that this is not a new idea.

"The idea of a mock

Kevin Vink/Didsbury Review

crash has been around for a while," said Wright. "We had done one at the Hugh Sutherland high school in Carstairs in the spring and it was fairly well received and successful in terms of wanting to show students what it was like to be there at a crash scene."

"We always say make sure you have a sober ride home. Make sure you have an agreement with your parents that no matter what time you call them for a ride home, that they will pick you up and not give you the gears."

He added that an agreement like that is one of those unconditional agreements that parents should have with their kids. It may be the difference between safety and driving home impaired.

Schools take over the streets for Terry Fox Run

BY KEVIN VINK
Review Staff

Very rarely does the town of Didsbury have random stampedes of youngsters, yet last Thursday, all three of the town's schools organized a massive Terry Fox Run for local students with nearly 1,000 participants in total.

Jeff Thompson, principal of Westglen School, noted that this year, Didsbury High School ran a little later than the other two schools, and because of that, they didn't join with the other schools' runs.

Between Westglen and Ross Ford Elementary alone, Thompson noted that there were about 700 students running the route at once, plus close to 250 from the Didsbury High School, according to Garth Dagg, principal of DHS.

Brent Runnett said this is his eighth year as principal of Ross Ford, and that the school has done a run every year that he's been there.

"It's always been super," said Runnett.

"It's something that we kind of look forward to every year. We get to introduce Terry as a wonderful Canadian hero, celebrate his great example, and just help keep that legacy going."

He said that having an event of this scale helps encourage kids, as they get older and move on in life, to participate in the community runs and keep up their involvement with the cause.

As far as fundraising goes, Runnett said, "We do a silver collection and kids give what they can. We have a jar at our front desk and we'll add that total up collectively (with Westglen's contributions) in about a week's time."

He added that the school always receives great support from the town.

"The town office does a lot of hustle for us to make sure this goes every year," he said, "and the downtown businesses as well have supported us very nicely over the years...they really do treat us very well."

"Town council is always put in a position every year where we get started and we're focused on the start-up. Now it's often the town that calls over and says 'Hey, are you guys doing your run again?' And so it's Luana Smith at the town office, she's been a great big help."

Tina Heistad, the physical education director for Westglen, said that her Grade 8 leadership class played a big role in organizing the school's fundraisers.

"The Grade 8 leadership has taken on the Terry Fox Run," said Heistad, "and what they did is they organized activities for the kids to pay-to-play, so in the gym we played a dodgeball game and the kids had to pay a dollar and all the money went to the foundation."

She noted that the students also had a two-day bake sale, raising a couple of hundred dollars, and the students also sold lemonade after the race for a dollar a cup.

"We had an assembly to kick off all the events to let the kids know what we were doing and we played a 10-minute clip of the Terry Fox run...a lot of them were inspired by what he did. I think having the cross-country running at the same time, they realized how far the marathon actually was that he ran every day."

"I think it inspired them to realize that raising money for cancer research is important and what Terry Fox did was pretty amazing."

Heistad added that this year more than any other year, she thinks the students really understood that what Terry Fox did was pretty miraculous.

"So I think the kids are doing really well with understanding what that's all about," she said, "The (leadership class) wanted to dress up, and in memory of him they were dressing up as their favourite sport. So they were wearing some uniforms and dressed up a little bit just to get into the spirit of the event a little bit more."

Garth Dagg, principal of DHS, said that the school council organized the school's events.

"So if people around town noticed a lot of bright neon colours going by, that was part of the day is the 'Terry Fox Tight and Bright' walk, so we had a lot of kids wearing fluorescent colours and funny-looking outfits and that was part of the spirit part of it."

He said the "Grade 12s start and lead our students around the route. Our goal was that every student should bring at least two dollars, a lot of kids brought at least a toonie and some brought more."

Dagg also noted that the town was very supportive, "They put some barricades out to kind of widen the sidewalk down the street for our kids."

The funds raised by the schools will all be pooled together and counted this week, added Dagg.

Local on her way to Miss Rodeo Canada

BY KEVIN VINK
Review Staff

Resident Gillian Shields, Miss Rodeo Airdrie 2011, has been on the road to become Miss Rodeo Canada for the last five years, and with just more than a month until the competition, she is working hard to prepare herself for the test.

Jo Lawes, owner of Queenie Central and Shields' coach and co-ordinator since 2007, said if Shields wins the title, then she will tour Western Canada, the United States and Australia, attending events and rodeos.

"She'll go to places like Cheyenne Frontier Days and the National Finals Rodeo," said Lawes, "that will be her first office for Miss Rodeo Canada. She'd go to places like Denver, to their stock show, and she would attend some of the largest rodeos in North America."

Lawes said sometimes Shields will pay for things up front and be reimbursed later, but "she will not be able to work full-time, so she will have to be able to pay that up front, plus her clothing won't be paid for and her living expenses are not paid for either."

Because of the nature of the work, which is a volunteer position, much of the cost related to what rodeo royalty does has to be footed by the royals themselves, stated 21-year-old Shields.

That's why she will be holding a fundraiser on Oct. 6 at the Elks Hall with a hypnotist, beef-on-a-bun dinner, a dance and live and silent auctions to help raise funds for that.

Musician Jake Peters will be playing for the crowd and Shields will take a turn on stage with her violin as well. If she doesn't win the title in November, she noted that all the money raised that night will be given back to a charity that will be chosen by attendees.

"Miss Rodeo Canada is a volunteer, non-paid position," said Shields, who, as rodeo royalty, acts as an ambassador for the sport as well as the area she represents.

"She has one major sponsor already," said Lawes, "someone who gave her a cash donation and that's CFC Contractors."

Shields said she is trying for the national title because she likes what she does as rodeo royalty.

"There's so many things that I love being able to do," said Shields. "I travel around to different rodeos as visiting royalty, get involved with special needs rodeos, pancake breakfasts, habitat for humanity house-building, and fundraisers for many non-profit associations."

She also gets to be deeply involved in the sport of rodeo, which she has competed in as a barrel racer.

"It's like a family itself," added Shields. "I love volunteering too. I love being able to associate with, and get to know other volunteers, because the people who are volunteers are what make a community great."

"They're the ones that keep the community strong and they're always such great people to work with. It's just really great to give back to people and help people, and I just don't think you can get a better feeling doing anything else. I love it."

Lawes said that many people are wondering why she is from Didsbury and she's representing Airdrie in the Miss Rodeo Canada competition.

"That's got to be the biggest question that we've been asked, and that is because there's a rule that you cannot run for Miss Rodeo Canada unless you represent a Canadian professional rodeo. Didsbury is an amateur rodeo and they don't have royalty either."

Because of this, she went to the nearest professional rodeo, which runs in Airdrie.

"In the past," noted Lawes, "she has been the Carstairs rodeo queen, she's been Miss Rodeo Sundre, she's been a top-six qualifier in the Calgary Stampede, and is Miss Rodeo Airdrie."

"So she has the most competitions and qualifications going into Miss Rodeo Canada than any other contestant there."

Because the position is full-time, said Lawes, Shields has had to put her education to become a teacher on hold, because trying to do a full course load and run at the same time would have been too difficult, besides the fact that the competition runs in early November, with the crowning taking place on the Nov. 7.

However, there are scholarships available if she makes it, so it's something of a trade-off.

The competition is not a beauty pageant, noted Shields, and her score will be determined by a number of things such as her prepared speech, impromptu speaking, personal interviews, horsemanship, appearance, personality, applications, and a written exam on the history of the Canadian professional rodeo association.

Didsbury has had one other resident become Miss Rodeo Canada, noted Lawes, and she also represented Airdrie. Sheila Taylor held the title in the year 2000.

Tickets to Shields' fundraiser are available at the House of Hair in town, or by contacting Shields directly at (403) 559-7743.

RUN

Carolyn Massel, vice-principal of Westglen School, offered a few reasons why the event may not have had a large attendance.

"It was a pretty busy weekend that weekend," said Massel. "All of our volleyball teams were out in Olds at a tournament and runners were at different things. It was too bad because it was a fun morning.

"It was also a gorgeous weekend in September and people are finishing harvesting.

"So it was very gracious of (those that came), because with the money they donated, we ended up with $100 to our breakfast program and every little bit helps."

She noted that there were more volunteers than participants.

"The ag society people that organized it were quite discouraged, but it was the first time we've ever done it and we're hoping that they would like to take it on again next year because now people know that it's there, right?"

Massel said the breakfast program, which has been running for several years, is open to any student for free.

On any given date, almost half of the students partake.

"It's not a full-on sausage and eggs kind of thing but you know, but this morning, it was cinnamon raisin bagels and a little bit of fruit and cheese.

"A lot of our kids have had a really long bus ride and it gives them a chance to have a snack so that they're well set up for the morning, and there's other kids where maybe breakfast just wasn't able to happen at home this morning too."

She added that it's important to get all of the students off to as strong a start as possible.

"Research has shown that well-nourished children demonstrate improved scholastic performance, have greater concentration, and are calmer and more energetic. We have been fortunate that Westglen students have been able to experience these benefits.

"Our students often express a sense of pride in and an appreciation for this program."

The breakfast program, she noted, is made possible through grants and donations from the community, for which the school is very appreciative.

DHS celebrates students' achievements

BY KEVIN VINK
Review Staff

Didsbury High School held its annual awards night on Sept. 20, celebrating the achievements of local students from the 2011-2012 school year.

Special plaques were awarded to three students in the all-around category: Kyra Paulgaard, Grade 9; Emma Wassmer, Grade 10; and Austin Reister, Grade 11.

Two other special plaques were also awarded: the Spirit of Youth award was given to Stephanie Evenson, and the Dragon's Code award was received by Cody Miller.

A total of 61 students made the honour roll: 19 students from Grade 9; 21 from Grade 10; and 21 from Grade 11 as well.

Sixteen graduating students made the honour roll, with Katarina Graves and Jacob Strautman graduating with distinction.

During the course of the evening, the recipients of the Alexander Rutherford Scholarship were announced, with a total of 13 students receiving the grants, totalling $26,900 in funding.

Special medallions were also awarded to students based on performance in individual classes, for a total of 40 medallions.

Mischief for mischief's sake

A resident went out to their work truck in the morning of Sept. 23, only to find that the tires had been flattened and some of the welding cables had been strung out, according to Sgt. Jeff Jacobson of the Didsbury RCMP.

The truck, which sat overnight on the 1800 block of 16 Street was found with flattened tires, noted Jacobson. The caps from the tires were missing and despite that there was no obvious damage to the tires, Jacobson said the tires were not staying inflated when the owner of the vehicle tried to fill them.

"I think it was just strictly for mischief purposes. They went there to cause some havoc, obviously."

RCMP are asking anybody with information regarding the incident to come forward with information by either calling the local detachment or the Crime Stoppers hotline at 1-800-222-TIPS.

Early morning impaired charge

A suspected impaired driver was charged in a mid-morning stop by police recently.

At about 10 a.m. on Sept. 22, a member of the RCMP was driving on 23 Avenue on an unrelated matter, said Jacobson, and while driving, the officer heard some tires squealing and saw a red minivan fishtailing down the street.

Jacobson said "smoke was coming off the tires. They had really hammered on the gas."

The officer pulled the vehicle over and based on breath samples given, RCMP allege the driver was impaired by alcohol, noted Jacobson.

A 19-year-old male from Didsbury is facing impaired driving charges.

"That was another interesting one where a member was in the right place at the right time resulting in an investigation and ultimately charges for somebody who was impaired at 10 o'clock in the morning," Jacobson said.

Stolen vehicle recovered during checkstop

During a checkstop at the intersection of Highway 582 and Highway 2A on the evening of Sept. 25, Didsbury RCMP collared occupants in a stolen vehicle.

"While there, a vehicle pulled up and appeared that it was not going to stop, and members were able to flag it down," stated Jacobson. "It was determined that the vehicle was in fact stolen out of Calgary earlier that morning."

The driver of the vehicle, a 16-year-old female from Calgary, is facing charges of possession of stolen property, he said.

Two of the passengers, a 15-year-old male and a 17-year-old male, both from Calgary, were on numerous conditions that included curfews and orders to keep the peace, said Jacobson.

"They have subsequently been charged with a number of related offences and were remanded during a hearing for that."

Two other passengers, one from Calgary and one from the Didsbury area were released without charge, said Jacobson, who added that both of them were 14-year-old females.

"Indications on the file," he said, "are that the driver had the vehicle for a few hours and was picking up passengers along the way. She picked up the one from Didsbury and was headed to Olds to track down another passenger."

"It was a little bit of luck where they happened to come through our checkstop at, for us, the right time. Quite often if you get a bunch of youth together in a stolen vehicle it can turn pretty ugly, and we were pretty fortunate we came across them when we did."

Slow period for RCMP, but not criminals

Didsbury RCMP say they are able to focus more on proactive policing as less service calls come in with summer winding down.

"And what we find is when we start going into these slower periods, we have more time to do proactive things," said Jacobson.

"So this is one incident where members had time to do a checkstop. We sometimes tend to get more crime during the slower period."

"Now we have more time to do some of the proactive stuff and actually come across things that are going on, otherwise quite often we're doing responses (instead)."

Didsbury RCMP were able to recently execute a warrant for arrest. Officers were made aware that a man with a warrant out for his arrest was living between Didsbury and Carstairs to the east, according to Jacobson.

A 38-year-old male was tracked down to his residence and at the same time, he added, police located a dirt bike that was reported stolen from Stettler.

Who do you know... that is celebrating any of these special events? • Birth of a child • Wedding • Special Anniversary: 25, 40, 50, 60, etc.

180. Thank You 180. Thank You

We would like to thank the many neighbours and even passers-by that responded to our impromptu farm field barbeque on Friday, September 21. Special thanks go out to the Glen Spady Farm's team for being first on the scene well-equipped with extinguishers and cultivation equipment (it's a little early to be depth checking that air seeder, isn't it, Lyle and Mike?), the Blaine Gatez harvest crew, whose efforts and water truck saved our crop, Richard Goetzen and Lyle Spady who quickly offered to come over to finish the field the correct way, and as always good friend "Type A" Colin and son Cole Smith for showing up with their combine to continue harvesting before the fire was even out (literally: no time for introspection; there's work to be done). All in attendance, and especially us, were very grateful for the Carstairs and Didsbury Fire Departments' work here and for the valuable work they do in our rural community not just on this day, but all the time. At our next neighbourhood event we will try to serve something much more appealing than an old combine. Cam and Susan Spady
